Improve the accessibility of visual content in slides and videos.

As part of the content creation process, please remember to ensure that slide files and videos containing images and diagrams are accessible. It is necessary to provide explicit description as well as explanation of the visual aspects of the slide. For example, the verbal explanation for the slide below might be something like...

The first three of seven essential teaching aims for reflection are represented on this slide. First, we see an illustration of colorful thought bubbles representing the aim to foster critical thinking and to challenge the taken-for-granted assumptions in the field. The second image on the slide shows a young girl crouched down carefully examining something in the soil. This image represents the intention of educators to encourage meaningful engagement with course content or real world applications of that content. Finally, we see a photo of three orange and white cats each looking in a different direction taking little to no notice of one another. This image represents a situation we aim to avoid in the class environment; instead, we aim for students to interact and collaborate in their learning, to explore content and question it together. This teaching aim is often referred to as building a community of inquiry.
